Laval's Return to Power Halts U. S. Stabilization Overtures

WASHINGTON — How much the United States is in earnest regarding the stabilization of currency is indicated by a secret diplomatic conversation which took place during the height of the French parliamentary crisis.

Just after the Bouisson Cabinet was formed for the purpose of taking emergency measures regarding the franc, Roosevelt's Ambassador Straus approached Joseph Caillaux, newly appointed Minister of Finance.

He suggested that the time might now be propitious for France to bring about a fractional devaluation of the franc. The idea was that the United States and other nations would then co-operate with France in stabilizing world currencies.

Ambassador Straus, however, acted a little too soon. Next day the Bouisson Cabinet was defeated. Premier Laval, who is a champion of the gold franc, came into power.

Stabilization was delayed but probably for a short time only. It will have to come soon.

Japanese Strategy

There was a time when the Japanese invasion of China would have brought forth vigorous diplomatic protests from the United States. This was the policy not only of the Republican administration of Herbert Hoover, but of the Democratic administration of Woodrow Wilson.

Now that policy has changed.

Never before have the Japanese been so frank about their designs on China. Never before have they planned to penetrate so far into the heart of China proper. Never before have they so encroached on areas where the British, American, French and Italian governments have troops and important business interests.

The State Department, however, will do little about it. There may be some routine diplomatic notes—just as a matter of form. But nothing more.

Reason for this is that the Japanese have chosen a time psychologically and completely favorable to them. All the world is engrossed in something else.

Russia, always greatly interested in China, is worried about Germany and Poland. Britain, which also has great interest, is engaged in a vigorous undercover debate with Italy over Abyssinia. Also it is concerned about Germany. France is troubled about both Germany and the Abyssinian situation.

And the United States not only does not want to act alone, but is absorbed with the internal situation caused by the Supreme Court and the NRA. The Japanese picked their time cleverly.

Hoboes Heaven

Harry Hopkins has a new heaven for hoboes. In Missouri the FERA has established a train of box cars on a railroad siding—and no a "bull" in sight.

No police will intrade upon their resort, for they live under the benevolent protection of the Federal Transient Bureau of Missouri. The bureau, seeking to give transients a setting in which they would be contented, and which would be at the same time economical, took over one of the long trains used by railroad contractors as sleeping quarters for workmen.

The camp now consists of 22 cars, including two kitchens, two

CROP CONTROL TASK PUZZLES "GRASS ROOTS"

Success of New Deal Farm Program Leaves Republicans in Quandary

ARGUE ALL NIGHT

Convention Agrees, However, New Deal Wrong

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 11—The easiest part of their program accomplished — unbridged denunciation of the Roosevelt administration—the 8,000 Republicans who comprise the "grass-roots" conference of the prairie states turned today to the difficult task of framing the farm belt's substitute for the New Deal.

Struggle All Night

Here they encountered trouble.

A weary resolutions committee struggled through most of the night in a smoke-filled room to find an answer to the question of what is to supplant the AAA and the NRA, bearing the Republican label. As the sun's rays broke across the tomb of Lincoln, in this historic setting, they had not found the answer.

They agreed, vociferously, these thousands of Republicans from the corn and hog states that the New Deal is all wrong; that they are being regimented under a bureaucracy in Washington; that curtailed agricultural production while millions are in want is infamous; that they know better how to run their farms and businesses than all the "brain trusters" in Washington.

Aids Thousands

But when they recalled that the present agricultural program, infamous as it may be, has put millions of dollars into the pockets of mid-western producers: that the crop-curtailment program received something like a 7-to-1 endorsement by the producers in a recent election, they were hard put to frame an alternative program that would square with their principles and at the same time prove politically acceptable to the hard-bitten realists who inhabit the prairies.

The problem before the hard-pushed resolutions committee was:

How to frame a program that would blast the AAA, without at the same time taking away from the farmer the benefit checks that have been pouring out of Washington.

Rules Worth Knowing In Regard to the Flag

A flag typifies the ideals, not the prejudices, of a nation.

FLAG DAY in the United States—June 14—is a time for reflection concerning the flag, as well as a day to learn the proper observances in connection with it.

The flag is a symbol of a nation. It typifies the ideals, not the prejudices, of a country. It is the symbol in times of peace as well as in war, and thus we ought ever to keep the nation it represents as one devoted to the highest ideals and practices toward all persons.

There are certain rules of observance which we and our children may choose to follow in regard to the flag.

The flag should be displayed from sunrise to sunset. When it is displayed flat, either horizontally or vertically, the group of stars should be to the observer's left.

When the flag is displayed at church it should be from a staff placed to the congregation's right.

Do not place any object or emblem of any kind on or above the flag of the nation.

Never use the flag as draping.

Do not fasten the flag over the hood, top or sides of an automobile or any other vehicle.

LENINGRAD, U. S. S. R., June 11—A 20-year-old woman bandit who with her husband, her mother and four confederates was held responsible for twelve murders in the past two years, was executed by a firing squad today following her conviction by the supreme court.

The girl, Maria Laboutkina, was accused of terrorizing the forest paths around Leningrad with her lawless aides, killing and robbing berry-pickers, picnickers and travelers.

Boy Visits House Where He Was Held by Captors

SPOKANE, Wash., June 11—G-men made a thorough search today of the dilapidated brown bungalow with two gables where nine-year-old George Weyerhauser was held a kidnap victim.

If the department of justice agents uncovered any clues which will aid in the speedy conviction of Harmon Waley and his wife, and others in the "egoist" kidnap gang, they kept the discoveries for court presentation.

Last night the boy who was released for $200,000 ransom accompanied G-men to the hideout house.

Crowds gathered around the bungalow in the South hill residential section of the city.

"Here he comes," the crowd whispered.

Keeps Face Hidden

The boy appeared to be nervous and apparently was keeping his face from the crowd. Several photographers were ordered from the yard of the home by G-men.

After inspecting the house for half an hour the federal men and the boy walked from the house. George then was taken to a machine and returned to his home in Tacoma, approximately 300 miles from here.

Federal officers refused to divulge any discoveries whatsoever.

Residents in the South hill district, particularly a grocer on a corner store, definitely identified photographs of Waley and William Mahan as two of the men who occupied the house. The grocer who made the identifications is L. T. Lockhart.

"They came here with their wives," Lockhart said.

Little Girl Seen

An important development came when neighbors recalled that one of the women visitors or occupants of the house had a small daughter, about four years of age. Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor revealed their year-old son Billy referred to the girl was "Wanda."

OHIO'S MINES CLOSE SUNDAY

Nation-wide Walkout To Be Airtight In This State, Tetlow Says.

COLUMBUS, June 11—Organized Ohio miners will clamp the lid on all coal productions at midnight Sunday to make the nation-wide walk-out "air tight" in this state, Percy Tetlow, president of United Mine Workers in Ohio, announced today.

A coal famine will grip the state unless a new wage agreement is signed by operators to replace the contracts with miners that expire this week.

Roving squads of pickets will patrol approximately 1,000 mines operated independently to see that operations are halted simultaneously with the walk-out in union mines.

Shipments from the mines, at capacity now in preparation for the strike due Sunday, will be terminated. Only coal consigned to hospitals, schools and public welfare agencies will be permitted to leave the mines, Tetlow declared.

CHIEF G-MAN CLAIMS ONLY TWO DID JOB

Money in Tacoma Abduction Found Buried Under Ground in Utah

STILL SEEK MAHAN

Woman to Escape Fight for Her Life

WASHINGTON, June 11— J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the "G" men, announced today that about $90,000 more of the Weyerhauser kidnap ransom money has been found about 90 miles from Salt Lake City.

With the $15,155 seized in the automobile William Mahan abandoned in his flight from Butte, Mont., more than $100,000 of the $200,000 ransom money has now been recovered.

The money, the exact amount of which was $90,700, was discovered at Immigration Pass, an isolated little settlement some 90 miles from Salt Lake City, where Harmon and Margaret Waley were arrested Saturday for the kidnaping of little George Weyerhauser, Tacoma, Wash., lumber heir.

It was through this famous cross in the mountains that Brigham Young, and his colonists passed in the early days of the settlement of Utah, founding the great Mormon religion.

Found Under Ground

The money was buried two feet under the ground covered by a black oilcloth and a gunny sack. The money was located by justice department agents about two mile from the highway.

This money is believed to be a part of the "split" between Harmon Waley and Mahan, now being hunted by "G" men.

Hoover disclosed for the first time today that he believes the kidnaping was a "two-man" job.

Margaret Waley apparently was only engaged as an indirect accomplice, Hoover believes.

At the same time, Hoover revealed further startling revelations in this most sensational of modern "snatches." They were:

1. The little kidnap victim has been taken secretly to the clapboard bungalow at 1509 West Eleventh street, in Spokane, where he was said to have been held captive—and identified the dwelling positively as his prison.

2. Announcement that Mahan burned some $4,000 of the "hot" ransom money while fleeing from Spokane.

3. Disclosure that Waley had been in some unexplained manner short-changed $5,000.

Not Out of State

4. The startling announcement by Hoover that it is doubtful if the Waleys, Mahan if he is captured and many others who may be apprehended and implicated in the kidnaping, can be prosecuted under the so-called "Lindbergh

The girl, Maria Laboutkina, was accused of terrorizing the forest paths around Leningrad with her lawless aides, killing and robbing berry-pickers, picnickers and travelers.

Boy Visits House Where He Was Held by Captors

SPOKANE, Wash., June 11—G-men made a thorough search today of the dilapidated brown bungalow with two gables where nine-year-old George Weyerhauser was held a kidnap victim.

If the department of justice agents uncovered any clues which will aid in the speedy conviction of Harmon Waley and his wife, and others in the "egoist" kidnap gang, they kept the discoveries for court presentation.

Last night the boy who was released for $200,000 ransom accompanied G-men to the hideout house.

Crowds gathered around the bungalow in the South hill residential section of the city.

"Here he comes," the crowd whispered.

Keeps Face Hidden

The boy appeared to be nervous and apparently was keeping his face from the crowd. Several photographers were ordered from the yard of the home by G-men.

After inspecting the house for half an hour the federal men and the boy walked from the house. George then was taken to a machine and returned to his home in Tacoma, approximately 300 miles from here.

Federal officers refused to divulge any discoveries whatsoever.

Residents in the South hill district, particularly a grocer on a corner store, definitely identified photographs of Waley and William Mahan as two of the men who occupied the house. The grocer who made the identifications is L. T. Lockhart.

"They came here with their wives," Lockhart said.

Little Girl Seen

An important development came when neighbors recalled that one of the women visitors or occupants of the house had a small daughter, about four years of age. Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor revealed their year-old son Billy referred to the girl was "Wanda."

OHIO'S MINES CLOSE SUNDAY

Nation-wide Walkout To Be Airtight In This State, Tetlow Says.

COLUMBUS, June 11—Organized Ohio miners will clamp the lid on all coal productions at midnight Sunday to make the nation-wide walk-out "air tight" in this state, Percy Tetlow, president of United Mine Workers in Ohio, announced today.

A coal famine will grip the state unless a new wage agreement is signed by operators to replace the contracts with miners that expire this week.

Roving squads of pickets will patrol approximately 1,000 mines operated independently to see that operations are halted simultaneously with the walk-out in union mines.

Shipments from the mines, at capacity now in preparation for the strike due Sunday, will be terminated. Only coal consigned to hospitals, schools and public welfare agencies will be permitted to leave the mines, Tetlow declared.

CHIEF G-MAN CLAIMS ONLY TWO DID JOB

Money in Tacoma Abduction Found Buried Under Ground in Utah

STILL SEEK MAHAN

Woman to Escape Fight for Her Life

WASHINGTON, June 11— J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the "G" men, announced today that about $90,000 more of the Weyerhauser kidnap ransom money has been found about 90 miles from Salt Lake City.

With the $15,155 seized in the automobile William Mahan abandoned in his flight from Butte, Mont., more than $100,000 of the $200,000 ransom money has now been recovered.

The money, the exact amount of which was $90,700, was discovered at Immigration Pass, an isolated little settlement some 90 miles from Salt Lake City, where Harmon and Margaret Waley were arrested Saturday for the kidnaping of little George Weyerhauser, Tacoma, Wash., lumber heir.

It was through this famous cross in the mountains that Brigham Young, and his colonists passed in the early days of the settlement of Utah, founding the great Mormon religion.

Found Under Ground

The money was buried two feet under the ground covered by a black oilcloth and a gunny sack. The money was located by justice department agents about two mile from the highway.

This money is believed to be a part of the "split" between Harmon Waley and Mahan, now being hunted by "G" men.

Hoover disclosed for the first time today that he believes the kidnaping was a "two-man" job.

Margaret Waley apparently was only engaged as an indirect accomplice, Hoover believes.

At the same time, Hoover revealed further startling revelations in this most sensational of modern "snatches." They were:

1. The little kidnap victim has been taken secretly to the clapboard bungalow at 1509 West Eleventh street, in Spokane, where he was said to have been held captive—and identified the dwelling positively as his prison.

2. Announcement that Mahan burned some $4,000 of the "hot" ransom money while fleeing from Spokane.

3. Disclosure that Waley had been in some unexplained manner short-changed $5,000.

Not Out of State

4. The startling announcement by Hoover that it is doubtful if the Waleys, Mahan if he is captured and many others who may be apprehended and implicated in the kidnaping, can be prosecuted under the so-called "Lindbergh

VACATION TIME

VACATION days for school children are here.

The youngsters released from classrooms are full of youthful energy and enthusiasm. In their excitement they will do certain things they shouldn't while playing, Therefore . . .

"Let's be particularly careful about our driving during the vacation period," Highway Director John Jaster, jr., warns motorists.

"Traffic deaths among children tend to increase during vacation time. At any moment a playing child may dart from the curb into the path of an auto. In his carefree way the child isn't thinking about safety; he is too absorbed in the spirit of play.

"If the children won't think for themselves let's do their thinking for them," says Mr. Jaster. "If there's any one thing that should mean SLOW DOWN to a driver it is a group of youngsters playing in or near the street or highway. A playing child should be a HUMAN CAUTION SIGN to motorists, who could follow no better rule than to drive as though the children were their OWN."

Mr. Jaster also reminds the parents to do everything within their power to keep the children off the streets and highways, especially where the volume of traffic is heavy.

PATRONAGE EVIL

FROM the governor of Michigan comes strong words regarding the menace of patronage:

"Patronage is today the most corroding influence in popular government. No administration, no matter how clean its motives may be, nor how wise its policies, can render full service to the people so long as the patronage evil exists."

That clean-cut statement stands in marked contrast with the selfish views of politicians who interpret public office as an opportunity to throw out those who "do not belong" and fill all available posts with partisan favorites.

Good government demands that competency and loyalty to the public trust shall be the only factors worthy of consideration in connection with appointive positions.

America would benefit immeasurably if the patronage dispensers and grabbers were to be permanently displaced by leaders and subordinates imbued with a strong sense of statesmanlike responsibility.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. V. SHEPARD, Famous Bridge Teacher

DANGER AVERTED

IT IS too bad to be asked not to name the pilot of this hand. Certainly his skill represents the apotheosis of bidding. The way he averted danger does credit to his Scotch ancestry, with its touch of second sight. All I can do is to state that he sat North, and to call him declarer's partner. Perhaps, after all, his native thrift, not his warning of possible danger, caused the pilot to shift the last call to a grand slam at no-trumps, with 10 points more than a spade grand slam, according to the new scoring.

	♠ K J 10 5 2 ♥ A Q ♦ A K 9 ♣ A Q J
♠ 6 3 ♥ 9 8 7 5 4 3 2 ♦ 10 8 7 6 ♣ None	W. E. S. N.	♠ 8 ♥ None ♦ J 6 5 2 ♣ 10 9 8 7 5 4 3 2
	♠ A Q 9 7 4 ♥ K J 10 6 ♦ Q 4 ♣ K 6

Bidding went: South, 1-Spade; North 3-Spades, calling for features; South, 4-Spades, to show no side Ace; North, 4-No Trumps, to show all Aces aside from spades, and asking partner to show Kings, beginning with the lowest one held; South, 5-Clubs; North, 5-Diamonds, showing the K as his previous bid had shown the Ace; South, 5-Hearts to show the K; North, 6-Clubs, to show the Q. as partner had shown the K; South, 6-Diamonds to show the Q. partner having shown both Ace and K; North, 7-No Trumps, instead of 7-Spades that almost any other person would have bid. North held every high honor aside from the conventional 2½ quick tricks required to open bidding on a single suiter. Those honors must be A-Q of spades (1½ quick tricks) and the missing K's of hearts and clubs. North knew what they should be before his Scotch caution caused him to force partner to show them one at a time. When South showed the Q of diamonds there could be counted the following certain tricks at no-trumps: at least 5 spades, 2 hearts, 3 diamonds and 3 clubs, or 13 spread tricks, with no chance for a defender to ruff an opening lead of a long suit.

The opening lead was the fourth-best diamond and declarer merely spread his hand, showing his choice of fifteen safe tricks to win the thirteen required.

Suppose the hand had been played at 7-Spades. It would have gone down two tricks. East would have ruffed the opening lead of hearts and he stated that he would have led back his fourth-best club, which West would have ruffed. The only thing which would have prevented losing still another trick from a return lead of a heart was the fact that West, not East, held the one defensive trump not yet utilized for ruffing.

Aliquando bonus dormitat Homerus (Even good Homer sometimes nods). Knowing this to be true it is delightful to encounter such wide wakeness as North displayed.

STORMY LOVE

A YOUNG NAVY MAN'S ROMANCE — by BELLE BURNS GROMER

READ THIS FIRST:

Following a whirlwind romance in Shanghai where he is attached to a U. S. gunboat, carefree Lieutenant Valentine Preston suddenly marries Lia Garenne, an American southerner who is alone in the world except for an aunt in Peiping and a father in the Gobi desert whom she has not seen in years. When Val's orders arrive, transferring him to Puget Sound Navy Yard, Lia is bitterly disappointed at the thought of leaving China. At the commandant's reception at the Navy Yard Val finds Janice Edding, daughter of Captain Edding, and his childhood sweetheart. He had last seen her in Shanghai when he said goodby to her in a huff and that same day met Lia. The Prestons meet Maurice Cordray, aviation executive, who induces Lia to try for a part in connection with a masked ball he is supervising. Later with several others Val and Lia dine at Cordray's home. Lia and Cordray become quite interested in one another and Val is glad of a chance to talk with Janice again. Trying Chinese robes on Lia in his workshop, Cordray, also in costume, suddenly catches fire when Lia inadvertently knocks a cigaret lighter from his hand. He starts to run, Val tackles him and rolls him in a rug. Unhurt, Cordray thanks Val profusely for saving his life. At the ball Lia does a fantastic dance which is poorly received. However, Lia believes she has been a huge success. Val leaves for a naval reserve dinner in Seattle with Captain Edding. Val begins to feel that the entry of himself and Lia into the life of the navy yard, beginning with a drinking party, had not made a favorable impression on Captain Edding, his superior.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

ON THE TRIP across the bay Captain Edding responded kindly to Val's efforts at conversation; they fell into reminiscences of old Mare Island days and the little cruiser that Val and his father had constructed there on Sundays and holidays from the wreck of an old navy launch. And presently, because he knew Captain Edding's real affection for his father, the young officer found himself telling the older man the story of "Preston's Brain Throb"—the history of the rudder that he and his dad had partially worked out on that old cruiser and that years later Val had actually constructed, tried out and proved to his own satisfaction on the gunboat Moyan when she lost her regulation rudder during a typhoon in the Yellow Sea.

The recital appeared to catch the senior's interest. He asked many shrewd questions. But it was not until after the naval reserve dinner and they were on their way back to Bremerton that he said, "You have had a longer tour of foreign duty than was good for you, Preston, and now you must brush up professionally. At present, while the spring maneuvers are going on off the coast, with every available ship in the Atlantic and Pacific fleets taking part, you have a fine opportunity to study strategy and tactics. Some of these war games, of course, are secret and the ships under radio silence; but what news does come through is available to communications, and I strongly advise you to follow the problems and observe them closely."

He was silent for a space before he finally said, "You tell me your invention would accomplish a great saving in fuel, and one day before long I believe the tremendous expense of navy fuel oil will prove a serious question. It is good to see a young officer on the alert for new methods and I should like to see you develop this device successfully and make a name for yourself. Therefore, if you wish to give your spare time to perfecting your design and testing it out, I can not only put the shops and their facilities at your disposal, but also an old launch which is too worn to stand hoisting but is seaworthy enough for experimental purposes."

Val's eyes flamed with excitement. It would, he knew, mean a lot to him professionally if he could prove his invention. To win the co-operation of an influential officer like Captain Edding was a stride forward. He had been wanting to get at this thing for ages and here was his chance offered from a clear sky and on a silver platter! Boy!

It was after eleven when the captain picked up his car at the parking station near the dock and they drove into the yard and circled the hill toward Val's quarters. The bungalow, Val saw, was brightly lighted and, remembering his wife's proposed plan, he said, "I think Jan dined and is spending the evening with Mrs. Preston, captain. Won't you come in for a minute?"

As the two men descended from the car and went along the path toward the house Val, although he had barely mentioned the device to Lia, was anticipating her surprised delight when he told her of the captain's interest in his invention. And then, just before they reached the porch, a wild burst of laughter stopped him short in his tracks. Someone began to play the piano loudly and a chorus of voices shouted——

"Oh, the skuttle-butt popped at a hundred and three,
On the ice machine we made our tea.
The engines came up and jumped in the sea,
In the Armored Cruiser Squadron——"

Captain Edding also had halted. His face was expressionless, but his voice held a sharp note when he said, "After all, I think I shan't come in. Good night, Preston."

Val stood to watch him drive away. It was darned decent of the captain to step himself out of the picture and to ignore what sounded suspiciously like a wild party. Yet despite the other's lenience, Val sensed that the good feeling that had sprung up between them this evening had been spoiled.

He entered the house to be greeted by welcoming cries. Brad, he knew, was away, but in a swift glance he saw that Sue was there; also the Fields, two aviators from Sand Point, and several junior officers attached to a destroyer in dry-dock. From across the room Cordray nodded a greeting. The door between dining room and pantry stood open to disclose a strange young man running water on a pan of ice cubes.

Because it was his home, Val made an effort to speak civilly to everyone; but this accomplished he slipped into the back room, resolved to stay there. When Lia, followed a moment later and closed the door behind her, he snapped——

"I thought I asked you not to serve that liquor here."

"But, darling," she drawled, tucking a small hand into the crook of his elbow, "it isn't our liquor. Mr. Cordray dropped in with the crowd and brought his own cheer along. Wasn't it nice of him? And that isn't all. He has invited us to a gorgeous party he is giving in Seattle tomorrow night. I'm terribly thrilled over it. Come out now and be a nice host, dear. And be sure to thank Cordray for his delicious Scotch."

That bird had his nerve bringing liquor to his home, Val thought furiously. He was quite capable of buying his own stuff. When he said as much to Lia, she cried, "Oh, but he is only trying to be kind. You know, lovah, how grateful he is for what you did for him. Surely you aren't going to be rude to the one person in this dull place who has been really friendly!"

When her eyes filled with tears, he relented. After all, it would be obvious as the devil if he refused to appear. "All right," he conceded. "I'll be polite." But, he assured himself, he'd be damned if he'd join in their party or let them think he approved.

He came slowly out into the living room that displayed the first stages of its transformation in creamy enamel, silver tea-chest paper, the piano and few other pieces of new furniture. Here, as he glanced about at his guests, Val saw that aside from Sue and Cordray, there was no one he knew well. Two of the men were "plastered". Cordray, as usual, was drinking sparingly and sitting back to watch the others perform. When his eyes circled the room again, Val realized suddenly that Jan Edding was not present and the conviction grew that Lia had not asked her to dine as she had agreed.

The young stranger from the pantry approached with a tray of glasses tinkling with ice cubes. And suddenly Val craved a drink. The man holding the tray smiled at him. "You don't remember me," he said, "but my ship was in Changsha the day you took six unarmed bluejackets ashore and evacuated a Standard Oil outfit from under the nose of the toughest anti-foreign mob I've ever seen. By golly, you've got what it takes, Mr. Preston, and I'm sure glad to meet you."

Val enjoyed reviving Yangtze experiences with this ingratiating youngster. As they talked, he began to ask himself if a man shouldn't be permitted to entertain his friends in the privacy of his own home? After all, this wasn't a jail. A chap should have some rights. Presently, he reached out a hand toward the tempting tray.

To his first drink he said, "Salute!" to the second, "Happy landings," and after that he crossed to Cordray and held up his glass with the old navy toast, "Glad to see you aboard, sir." He had forgotten his firm resolution and Captain Edding's grave face. He said to Cordray, "It was kind of you to save Mrs. Preston from a dull evening. It is always a pleasure to welcome you in our home."

Later he played the piano and sang gay sea chanteys, cowboy laments, love songs. At three in the morning he made coffee and concocted a dish of bacon and eggs Meyerbeer that evoked howls of delight from his guests. As Lia told him at four-thirty, when they stood at the door calling good nights and watching two noisy carfuls depart to the tune of bellowing sirens—"You were a marvelous host, darling. Oh, but I was proud of you! Even with a late start, you made it a most successful party."

Heard & Seen

By KAY JAY

Newspapers of this section of the state have paid splendid tribute to the memory of "Billy" Ireland, famous artist and Janitor of "The Passing Show" in the Columbus Dispatch, since his untimely death two weeks ago, in editorials, special articles, cartoon and verse. One of the best tributes I have read is a brief poem by Katherine Neal Smith, which appeared recently in the Columbus Citizen. I believe it will be appreciated by "Billy's" many friends in Pickaway-co, and it is herewith reproduced:

WORDS OF TRIBUTE
(To Billy Ireland)

The curtain dropped upon
"The Passing Show"
The final scene . . .
The artist turned to go
In silence and alone
Along life's way,
Which leads to dawning
Of immortal day.

As thus he passed beyond
"The Gypsy Trail,"
To realms of light behind
Life's hidden veil,
We seem to see
The laurels he has won,
And seem to hear
The Master say, "Well done."

He won our love and praise
While he was here,
With pictured thoughts
Of humor, hope and cheer;
For this, we offer
Words of tribute true,
As floral wreaths
Our honors to renew.

T. P. Brown, local real estate man, is not a collector of postage stamps but he might well be classed as a dealer or broker. Some rare specimens pass through his hands, and where they come from and where they go is T. P.'s own secret.

A specimen of the centennial stamp of 1876 came into his hands the other day. It was in the form of a government stamped envelope, the stamp being printed in green. It was made in the shape of a shield, and bore this inscription: "1776. Three Cents. 1876." Also engraved on the stamp was a picture of a man on a galloping horse, a representation of the early-day mail carrier, and a picture of a steam engine and a mail car, the method of carrying the mail a century later.

And just a few days ago I saw a motion picture of an autogyro landing on the roof of a new postoffice building, which will probably be the 1976 method of transporting mail.

Editorial Of The Day

BLACKBERRY WINTER

(Washington C. H., Herald.)

The old timers are never surprised by unusual weather conditions, they have always seen "the like" of anything that happens, before, and, very frequently, evince no particular interest in it because of their familiarity with such occurrences. That familiarity is proven by the fact that they have a name to fit conditions.

For instance the unusually cool weather we have had this week is blackberry winter. That, they say is a spell of cool weather that always, or nearly always, comes when the blackberry bushes are in bloom and is proof positive that a bumper blackberry crop will be gathered in mid-summer.

Of course, even old timers admit that Indian summer, squaw winter, blackberry winter and other extra seasons are not so certain to come as our four seasons of spring, summer, autumn and winter but we nearly always have them.

All of which again reminds us of the old negro who standing on the bank of the Ohio river during a very disastrous and unusual flood in mid-July, calmly remarked "Dat's de June rise. We always has a June rise if 'n it don' come t'l Septem'ber."

No nothing surprises the old timers. They are ready for every occasion. In their long span of life they have seen the unusual occur very often and if not they think they have—all honor to them. We rather like the encouragement their tracing back through the years gives us. If it's imaginary it's encouraging.

A new radio amplifer would enable a politician to throw his voice a mile. The only trouble is that he would still be able to find it.

Poems That Live

FRIENDSHIP

As we travel down life's pathway,
There are many things at stake;
But the noblest of all our possessions
Are the true friends we make.

There are pleasures in possessions,
Of earthly things in store:
But our friends are sort of better
And are valued a great deal more.

To render a kind service,
Or make a sad soul free,
Should be our great endeavor,
For it brings happiness back to thee.

We have builded too much earthly,
Until our eyes are dim,
For the strength of life is not in us,
But how we worship Him. . . .

So as we travel down life's pathway;
Let us one and all not forget:
That others too are striving,
The Goal of Life to get.

"SKELETONIZED"

THEATRES

AT THE CIRCLE

"Hei Tiki," the First Division release on which the producer, Alexander Markey, spent five years in the making on the Island of Ghosts, New Zealand is showing at the Circle Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday.

Acclaimed as a true, authentic concept of Maori life and legend, "Hei Tiki" reveals certain aspects of this exotic people never before recorded by the camera.

Every foot of the film was developed and printed in Mr. Markey's bush laboratory which he built on the island. Every native sound was recorded in New Zealand, and every scene in the picture was taken there among the natives.

AT THE CLIFTONA

With reviewers' predictions that she is on the verge of stardom still ringing in her ears, Virginia Bruce plays the finest role of her career in the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "Society Doctor," opening Wednesday at the Cliftona Theatre.

In "Society Doctor," in which the entire action of the drama takes place within the period of eight hours, Miss Bruce appears as a pretty nurse with two young internes, Chester Morris and Robert Taylor, competing for her affections.

Adapted to the screen by Samuel Marx and Michael Fessier, the new screen play was directed by George Seitz.

AT THE GRAND

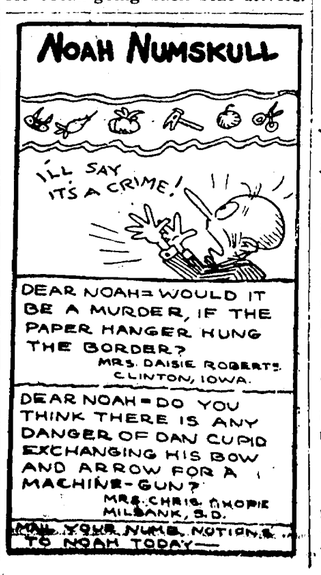

Shirley Temple, America's new screen darling, sings an old-fashioned song and accompanies it with an old-fashioned dance in her latest picture, 'The Little Colonel,' which is being shown at the Grand for the last time tonight.

The song is "Love's Young Dream" based on a very old folk tune. Shirley is co-starred with Lionel Barrymore in this Fox Film.

Deficient Diet Considered One Cause of Neuritis

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IT WOULD certainly hardly ever have occurred to our ancestors to suppose that neuritis was due to dietary deficiency. How large a factor such deficiency really plays is only now beginning to be made clear.

Dr. Clendening

During the last years of the nineteenth century a mysterious and devastating disease plagued and troubled the Dutch colonial officials in Java—especially the medical officials. It attacked large groups of the native population, and one of the peculiar things concerning it was that it did affect almost exclusively the native population of the colonial territories. It was, however, by no means confined to the Dutch colonies but was widespread in the Far East.

The name given it was beri-beri. Its most outstanding feature was a paralysis and neuralgia of the legs, terminating in dropsy.

Many theories were advanced to account for it. It was thought to be an infection, but this idea would not hold water, because if an infection it should have affected the foreign as well as the native population. At last, a Dutch physician noticed that the fowls which fed on the remainders of the local prison meals would develop paralysis, and this led him to search for a dietary cause.

Finally he found that the disease developed only in those who lived on an exclusively rice diet and, furthermore, rice that had been milled or polished so that the outer shell was removed. This shell on the rice contains certain vital elements, especially that known as vitamin B.

It is lack of the vitamin B, then, which allows the degeneration of the nerves to occur. Lack of other vital elements may produce the same thing, because in pellagra, which is probably another food deficiency disease, we have prominent nervous and neuralgic symptoms.

These studies have a more practical interest for those of us who live in temperate climates than most studies in tropical disease.

Neurities and neuralgia are frequently thought to be the result of the excessive use of alcohol. In fact, there is a form of multiple neuritis, known as "alcoholic neuritis". But, as in the case of that other disease supposed to be the result of alcohol, cirrhosis of the liver, it cannot be experimentally produced by giving large amounts of alcohol.

Alcoholic Not Hungry

Now, it is well known that the fellow on an alcoholic spree is very indifferent to what he eats. In fact, he frequently goes days without taking anything but coffee. So he is a good subject for food deficiency diseases.

Recent investigations have shown that so-called alcoholic neuritis is cured by giving vitamin B and that, in essence, it may be the same as beri-beri.

We have long known that the alcoholic on a spree is liable to develop pellagra. So many diseases formerly ascribed to alcohol may be due to the dietary abstinence of the alcoholic.

DUMB DORA

"It has been discovered," said the professor ponderously, "that the human body contains sulphur."

"Sulphur!" exclaimed a girl student wonderingly. "How much sulphur is there in a girl's body, professor?"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"Oh, the amount varies, of course," he replied.

'I see," she went on; "and is that why some of us make better matches than others?"

NOT AN ASSET

On his appointment, the new manager of a certain big bank was given much publicity, and photographs of him were reproduced in newspapers. All were not printed attractively.

A depositor wandered in, walked up to the manager, produced one of the photographic reproductions, and said: "Is this your picture?"

The manager assured him that it was.

"Are you the manager of this bank?"

The other admitted that he was.

"Well, give me my money!" ordered the depositor.

VACATION TIME

VACATION days for school children are here.

The youngsters released from classrooms are full of youthful energy and enthusiasm. In their excitement they will do certain things they shouldn't while playing. Therefore . . .

"Let's be particularly careful about our driving during the vacation period," Highway Director John Jaster, jr., warns motorists.

"Traffic deaths among children tend to increase during vacation time. At any moment a playing child may dart from the curb into the path of an auto. In his carefree way the child isn't thinking about safety; he is too absorbed in the spirit of play.

"If the children won't think for themselves let's do their thinking for them," says Mr. Jaster. "If there's any one thing that should mean SLOW DOWN to a driver it is a group of youngsters playing in or near the street or highway. A playing child should be a HUMAN CAUTION SIGN to motorists, who could follow no better rule than to drive as though the children were their OWN."

Mr. Jaster also reminds the parents to do everything within their power to keep the children off the streets and highways, especially where the volume of traffic is heavy.

PATRONAGE EVIL

FROM the governor of Michigan comes strong words regarding the menace of patronage:

"Patronage is today the most corroding influence in popular government. No administration, no matter how clean its motives may be, nor how wise its policies, can render full service to the people so long as the patronage evil exists."

That clean-cut statement stands in marked contrast with the selfish views of politicians who interpret public office as an opportunity to throw out those who "do not belong" and fill all available posts with partisan favorites.

Good government demands that competency and loyalty to the public trust shall be the only factors worthy of consideration in connection with appointive positions.

America would benefit immeasurably if the patronage dispensers and grabbers were to be permanently displaced by leaders and subordinates imbued with a strong sense of statesmanlike responsibility.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. V. SHEPARD, Famous Bridge Teacher

DANGER AVERTED

IT IS too bad to be asked not to name the pilot of this hand. Certainly his skill represents the apotheosis of bidding. The way he averted danger does credit to his Scotch ancestry, with its touch of second sight. All I can do is to state that he sat North, and to call him declarer's partner. Perhaps, after all, his native thrift, not his warning of possible danger, caused the pilot to shift the last call to a grand slam at no-trumps, with 10 points more than a spade grand slam, according to the new scoring.

	♠ K J 10 5 2 ♥ A Q ♦ A K 9 ♣ A Q J
♠ 6 3 ♥ 9 8 7 5 4 3 2 ♦ 10 8 7 3 ♣ None	W. N. E. S.	♠ 8 ♥ None ♦ J 6 5 2 ♣ 10 9 8 7 5 4 3 2
	♠ A Q 9 7 4 ♥ K J 10 6 ♦ Q 4 ♣ K 6

Bidding went: South, 1-Spade; North 3-Spades, calling for features; South, 4-Spades, to show no side Ace; North, 4-No Trumps, to show all Aces aside from spades, and asking partner to show Kings, beginning with the lowest one held; South, 5-Clubs; North, 5-Diamonds, showing the K as his previous bid had shown the Ace; South, 5-Hearts to show the K; North, 6-Clubs, to show the Q, as partner had shown the K; South, 6-Diamonds to show the Q, partner having shown both Ace and K; North, 7-No Trumps, instead of 7-Spades that almost any other person would have bid. North held every high honor aside from the conventional 2½ quick tricks required to open bidding on a single suiter. Those honors must be A-Q of spades (1½ quick tricks) and the missing K's of hearts and clubs. North knew what they should be before his Scotch caution caused him to force partner to show them one at a time. When South showed the Q of diamonds there could be counted the following certain tricks at no-trumps: at least 5 spades, 2 hearts, 3 diamonds and 3 clubs, or 13 spread tricks, with no chance for a defender to ruff an opening lead of a long suit.

The opening lead was the fourth-best diamond and declarer merely spread his hand, showing his choice of fifteen safe tricks to win the thirteen required.

Suppose the hand had been played at 7-Spades. It would have gone down two tricks. East would have ruffed the opening lead of hearts and he stated that he would have led back his fourth-best club, which West would have ruffed. The only thing which would have prevented losing still another trick from a return lead of a heart was the fact that West, not East, held the one defensive trump not yet utilized for ruffing.

Aliquando bonus dormitat Homerus (Even good Homer sometimes nods). Knowing this to be true it is delightful to encounter such wideawakeness as North displayed.

STORMY LOVE

A YOUNG NAVY MAN'S ROMANCE — by BELLE BURNS GROMER

READ THIS FIRST:

Following a whirlwind romance in Shanghai where he is attached to a U. S. gunboat, carefree Lieutenant Valentine Preston suddenly marries Lia Garenne, an American southerner who is alone in the world except for an aunt in Peiping and a father in the Gobi desert whom she has not seen in years. When Val's orders arrive, transferring him to Puget Sound Navy Yard, Lia is bitterly disappointed at the thought of leaving China. At the commandant's reception at the Navy Yard Val finds Janice Edding, daughter of Captain Edding, and his childhood sweetheart. He had last seen her in Shanghai when he said goodby to her in a huff and that same day met Lia. The Prestons meet Maurice Cordray, aviation executive, who induces Lia to try for a part in connection with a masked ball he is supervising. Later with several others Val and Lia dine at Cordray's home. Lia and Cordray become quite interested in one another and Val is glad of a chance to talk with Janice again. Trying Chinese robes on Lia in his workshop, Cordray, also in costume, suddenly catches fire when Lia inadvertently knocks a cigaret lighter from his hand. He starts to run, Val tackles him and rolls him in a rug. Unhurt, Cordray thanks Val profusely for saving his life. At the ball Lia does a fantastic dance which is poorly received. However, Lia believes she has been a huge success. Val leaves for a naval reserve dinner in Seattle with Captain Edding. Val begins to feel that the entry of himself and Lia into the life of the navy yard, beginning with a drinking party, had not made a favorable impression on Captain Edding, his superior.

ON THE TRIP across the bay Captain Edding responded kindly to Val's efforts at conversation; they fell into reminiscences of old Mare Island days and the little cruiser that Val and his father had constructed there on Sundays and holidays from the wreck of an old navy launch. And presently, because he knew Captain Edding's real affection for his father, the young officer found himself telling the older man the story of "Preston's Brain Throb"—the history of the rudder that he and his dad had partially worked out on that old cruiser and that years later Val had actually constructed, tried out and proved to his own satisfaction on the gunboat Moyan when she lost her regulation rudder during a typhoon in the Yellow Sea.

The recital appeared to catch the senior's interest. He asked many shrewd questions. But it was not until after the naval reserve dinner and they were on their way back to Bremerton that he said, "You have had a longer tour of foreign duty than was good for you, Preston, and now you must brush up professionally. At present, while the spring maneuvers are going on off the coast, with every available ship in the Atlantic and Pacific fleets taking part, you have a fine opportunity to study strategy and tactics. Some of these war games, of course, are secret and the ships under radio silence; but what news does come through is available to communications, and I strongly advise you to follow the problems and observe them closely."

He was silent for a space before he finally said, "You tell me your invention would accomplish a great saving in fuel, and one day before long I believe the tremendous expense of navy fuel oil will prove a serious question. It is good to see a young officer on the alert for new methods and I should like to see you develop this device successfully and make a name for yourself. Therefore, if you wish to give your spare time to perfecting your design and testing it out, I can not only put the shops and their facilities at your disposal, but also an old launch which is too worn to stand hoisting but is seaworthy enough for experimental purposes."

Val's eyes flamed with excitement. It would, he knew, mean a lot to him professionally if he could prove his invention. To win the co-operation of an influential officer like Captain Edding was a stride forward. He had been wanting to get at this thing for ages and here was his chance offered from a clear sky and on a silver platter! Boy!

It was after eleven when the captain picked up his car at the parking station near the dock and they drove into the yard and circled the hill toward Val's quarters. The bungalow, Val saw, was brightly lighted and, remembering his wife's proposed plan, he said, "I think Jan dined and is spending the evening with Mrs. Preston, captain. Won't you come in for a minute?"

As the two men descended from the car and went along the path toward the house Val, although he had barely mentioned the device to Lia, was anticipating her surprised delight when he told her of the captain's interest in his invention. And then, just before they reached the porch, a wild burst of laughter stopped him short in his tracks. Someone began to play the piano loudly and a chorus of voices shouted——

"Oh, the skuttle-butt popped at a hundred and three,
On the ice machine we made our tea,
The engines came up and jumped in the sea,
In the Armored Cruiser Squadron——"

Captain Edding also had halted. His face was expressionless, but his voice held a sharp note when he said, "After all, I think I shan't come in. Good night, Preston."

Val stood to watch him drive away. It was darned decent of the captain to step himself out of the picture and to ignore what sounded suspiciously like a wild party. Yet despite the other's lenience, Val sensed that the good feeling that had sprung up between them this evening had been spoiled.

He entered the house to be greeted by welcoming cries. Brad, he knew, was away, but in a swift glance he saw that Sue was there; also the Fields, two aviators from Sand Point and several junior officers attached to a destroyer in dry-dock. From across the room Cordray nodded a greeting. The door between dining room and pantry stood open to disclose a strange young man running water on a pan of ice cubes.

Because it was his home, Val made an effort to speak civilly to everyone; but this accomplished he slipped into the back room, resolved to stay there. When Lia followed a moment later and closed the door behind her, he snapped——?

"I thought I asked you not to serve that liquor here."

"But, darling," she drawled, tucking a small hand into the crook of his elbow, "it isn't our liquor. Mr. Cordray dropped in with the crowd and brought his own cheer along. Wasn't it nice of him? And that isn't all. He has invited us to a go'geous party he is giving in Seattle tomorrow night. I'm teh'bly thrilled over it. Come out now and be a nice host, deah. And be sure to thank Cordray for his delicious Scotch."

That bird had his nerve bringing liquor to his home, Val thought furiously. He was quite capable of buying his own stuff. When he said as much to Lia, she cried, "Oh, but he is only trying to be kind. You know, lovah, how grateful he is for what you did for him. Surely you aren't going to be rude to the one person in this dull place who has been really friendly!"

When her eyes filled with tears, he relented. After all, it would be obvious as the devil if he refused to appear. "All right," he conceded. "I'll be polite." But, he assured himself, he'd be damned if he'd join in their party or let them think he approved.

He came slowly out into the living room that displayed the first stages of its transformation in creamy enamel, silver tea-chest paper, the piano and few other pieces of new furniture. Here, as he glanced about at his guests, Val saw that aside from Sue and Cordray, there was no one he knew well. Two of the men were "plastered". Cordray, as usual, was drinking sparingly and sitting back to watch the others perform. When his eyes circled the room again, Val realized suddenly that Jan Edding was not present and the conviction grew that Lia had not asked her to dine as she had agreed.

The young stranger from the pantry approached with a tray of glasses tinkling with ice cubes. And suddenly Val craved a drink. The man holding the tray smiled at him. "You don't remember me," he said, "but my ship was in Changsha the day you took six unarmed bluejackets ashore and evacuated a Standard Oil outfit from under the nose of the toughest anti-foreign mob I've ever seen. By golly, you've got what it takes, Mr. Preston, and I'm sure glad to meet you."

Val enjoyed reviving Yangtze experiences with this ingratiating youngster. As they talked, he began to ask himself if a man shouldn't be permitted to entertain his friends in the privacy of his own home? After all, this wasn't a jail. A chap should have some rights. Presently, he reached out a hand toward the tempting tray.

To his first drink he said, "Salute!" to the second, "Happy landings," and after that he crossed to Cordray and held up his glass with the old navy toast, "Glad to see you aboard, sir." He had forgotten his firm resolution and Captain Edding's grave face. He said to Cordray, "It was kind of you to save Mrs. Preston from a dull evening. It is always a pleasure to welcome you in our home."

Later he played the piano and sang gay sea chanteys, cowboy laments, love songs. At three in the morning he made coffee and concocted a dish of bacon and eggs Meyerbeer that evoked howls of delight from his guests. As Lia told him at four-thirty, when they stood at the door calling good nights and watching two noisy carfuls depart to the tune of bellowing sirens—"You were a mahvelous host, darling. Oh, but I was proud of you! Even with a late start, you made it a most successful party."

Newspapers of this section of the state have paid splendid tribute to the memory of "Billy" Ireland, famous artist and Janitor of "The Passing Show" in the Columbus Dispatch, since his untimely death two weeks ago, in editorials, special articles, cartoon and verse. One of the best tributes I have read is a brief poem by Katherine Neal Smith, which appeared recently in the Columbus Citizen. I believe it will be appreciated by "Billy's" many friends in Pickaway-co, and it is herewith reproduced:

WORDS OF TRIBUTE
(To Billy Ireland)

The curtain dropped upon
"The Passing Show"
The final scene . . .
The artist turned to go
In silence and alone
Along life's way,
Which leads to dawning
Of immortal day.

As thus he passed beyond
"The Gypsy Trail,"
To realms of light behind
Life's hidden veil,
We seem to see
The laurels he has won,
And seem to hear
The Master say, "Well done."

He won our love and praise
While he was here,
With pictured thoughts
Of humor, hope and cheer;
For this, we offer
Words of tribute true,
As floral wreaths
Our honors to renew.

T. P. Brown, local real estate man, is not a collector of postage stamps but he might well be classed as a dealer or broker. Some rare specimens pass through his hands, and where they come from and where they go is T. P.'s own secret.

A specimen of the centennial stamp of 1876 came into his hands the other day. It was in the form of a government stamped envelope, the stamp being printed in green. It was made in the shape of a shield, and bore this inscription: "1776. Three Cents. 1876." Also engraved on the stamp was a picture of a man on a galloping horse, a representation of the early-day mail carrier, and a picture of a steam engine and a mail car, the method of carrying the mail a century later.

And just a few days ago I saw a motion picture of an autogyro landing on the roof of a new postoffice building, which will probably be the 1976 method of transporting mail.

Editorial Of The Day

BLACKBERRY WINTER

(Washington C. H., Herald.)

The old timers are never surprised by unusual weather conditions, they have always seen "the like" of anything that happens, before, and, very frequently, evince no particular interest in it because of their familiarity with such occurrences. That familiarity is proven by the fact that they have a name to fit conditions.

For instance the unusually cool weather we have had this week is blackberry winter. That, they say is a spell of cool weather that always, or nearly always, comes when the blackberry bushes are in bloom and is proof positive that a bumper blackberry crop will be gathered in mid-summer.

Of course, even old timers admit that Indian summer, squaw winter, blackberry winter and other extra seasons are not so certain to come as our four seasons of spring, summer, autumn and winter but we nearly always have them.

All of which again reminds us of the old negro who standing on the bank of the Ohio river during a very disastrous and unusual flood in mid-July, calmly remarked —"Dat's de June rise. We always has a June rise if 'n it don' come t'l Septem'er."

No nothing surprises the old timers. They are ready for every occasion. In their long span of life they have seen the unusual occur very often and if not they think they have—all honor to them. We rather like the encouragement their tracing back through the years gives us. If it's imaginary it's encouraging.

FRIENDSHIP

As we travel down life's pathway,
There are many things at stake;
But the noblest of all our possessions
Are the true friends we make.

There are pleasures in possessions,
Of earthly things in store:
But our friends are sort of better
And are valued a great deal more.

To render a kind service,
Or make a sad soul free,
Should be our great endeavor,
For it brings happiness back to thee.

We have builded too much earthly,
Until our eyes are dim,
For the strength of life is not in us,
But how we worship Him. . . .

So as we travel down life's pathway;
Let us one and all not forget:
That others too are striving,
The Goal of Life to get.

THEATRES

AT THE CIRCLE

"Hei Tiki," the First Division release on which the producer, Alexander Markey, spent five years in the making on the Island of Ghosts, New Zealand is showing at the Circle Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday.

Acclaimed as a true, authentic concept of Maori life and legend, "Hei Tiki" reveals certain aspects of this exotic people never before recorded by the camera.

Every foot of the film was developed and printed in Mr. Markey's bush laboratory which he built on the island. Every native sound was recorded in New Zealand, and every scene in the picture was taken there among the natives.

AT THE CLIFTONA

With reviewers' predictions that she is on the verge of stardom still ringing in her ears, Virginia Bruce plays the finest role of her career in the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "Society Doctor," opening Wednesday at the Cliftona Theatre.

In "Society Doctor," in which the entire action of the drama takes place within the period of eight hours, Miss Bruce appears as a pretty nurse with two young internes, Chester Morris and Robert Taylor, competing for her affections.

Adapted to the screen by Samuel Marx and Michael Fessier, the new screen play was directed by George Seitz.

AT THE GRAND

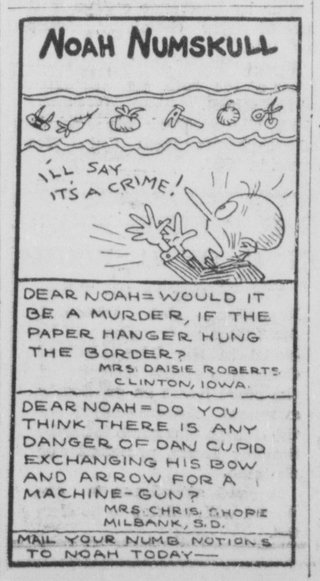

Shirley Temple, America's new screen darling, sings an old-fashioned song and accompanies it with an old-fashioned dance in her latest picture, 'The Little Colonel,' which is being shown at the Grand for the last time tonight.

The song is "Love's Young Dream" based on a very old folk tune. Shirley is co-starred with Lionel Barrymore in this Fox Film.

Deficient Diet Considered One Cause of Neuritis

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IT WOULD certainly hardly ever have occurred to our ancestors to suppose that neuritis was due to dietary deficiency. How large a factor such deficiency really plays is only now beginning to be made clear.

Dr. Clendening

During the last years of the nineteenth century a mysterious and devastating disease plagued and troubled the Dutch colonial officials in Java—especially the medical officials. It attacked large groups of the native population, and one of the peculiar things concerning it was that it did affect almost exclusively the native population of the colonial territories. It was, however, by no means confined to the Dutch colonies but was widespread in the Far East.

The name given it was beri-beri. Its most outstanding feature was a paralysis and neuralgia of the legs, terminating in dropsy.

Many theories were advanced to account for it. It was thought to be an infection, but this idea would not hold water, because if an infection it should have affected the foreign as well as the native population. At last, a Dutch physician noticed that the fowls which fed on the remainders of the local prison meals would develop paralysis, and this led him to search for a dietary cause.

Finally he found that the disease developed only in those who lived on an exclusively rice diet and, furthermore, rice that had been milled or polished so that the outer shell was removed. This shell on the rice contains certain vital elements, especially that known as vitamin B.

It is lack of the vitamin B, then, which allows the degeneration of the nerves to occur. Lack of other vital elements may produce the same thing, because in pellagra, which is probably another food deficiency disease, we have prominent nervous and neuralgic symptoms.

These studies have a more practical interest for those of us who live in temperate climates than most studies in tropical disease.

Neurities and neuralgia are frequently thought to be the result of the excessive use of alcohol. In fact, there is a form of multiple neuritis, known as "alcoholic neuritis". But, as in the case of that other disease supposed to be the result of alcohol, cirrhosis of the liver, it cannot be experimentally produced by giving large amounts of alcohol.

Alcoholic Not Hungry

Now, it is well known that the fellow on an alcoholic spree is very indifferent to what he eats. In fact, he frequently goes days without taking anything but coffee. So he is a good subject for food deficiency diseases.

Recent investigations have shown that so-called alcoholic neuritis is cured by giving vitamin B and that, in essence, it may be the same as beri-beri.

We have long known that the alcoholic on a spree is liable to develop pellagra. So many diseases formerly ascribed to alcohol may be due to the dietary abstinence of the alcoholic.

DUMB DORA

"It has been discovered," said the professor ponderously, "that the human body contains sulphur."

"Sulphur!" exclaimed a girl student wonderingly. "How much sulphur is there in a girl's body, professor?"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"Oh, the amount varies, of course," he replied.

'I see," she went on; "and is that why some of us make better matches than others?"

NOT AN ASSET

On his appointment, the new manager of a certain big bank was given much publicity, and photographs of him were reproduced in newspapers. All were not printed attractively.

A depositor wandered in, walked up to the manager, produced one of the photographic reproductions, and said: "Is this your picture?"

The manager assured him that it was.

"Are you the manager of this bank?"

The other admitted that he was.

"Well, give me my money!" ordered the depositor.

KROGER TO AWARD PRIZE TO CITY'S OLDEST CITIZEN

How long have you lived here?

If you've lived in this town longer than any one else you may win a valuable prize from Kroger's.

Announcement was made yesterday by officials of the Kroger Company that a prize would be awarded to the person who has lived longest in this town. The prize will be awarded on the basis of the number of years lived here, not on age of contestants.

It is expected that a great number of local residents who have been here for many years will compete for the honor of being known as the oldest resident. Officials of the Kroger Company stated that undoubtedly the contest would bring to light many interesting sidelights on the early years of this town. Every citizen will be keenly interested in learning who the town's oldest resident is.

Contestants are to register their names and the dates of the settlement in the town at the Kroger store. The Kroger manager will compile the list of old timers and the number of years of residence here and it is expected that more than 25 to 50 contestants will register. A photo of the prize winner will be published in these columns following the contest.

The Old Timer's Contest is being sponsored by the Kroger Company as part of their local celebration. Much interest has been aroused by the contest and everyone will watch for the outcome with a great deal of interest.

Dutch girls somehow are the symbol of cleanliness. And since the modern kitchen is the last word in shining spotlessness, these Dutch figures belong right there. Can't you picture them in shades of blue? Or, if you prefer, do them in black with one or more other colors—that would make a striking decoration! You'll enjoy doing these Dutch girls in all their daily household activities for they're almost entirely in cross stitch. And they're 8 to the inch crosses too. If there's a hope chest you know of, let these be your donation—you'll know you've contributed something that is practical and lovely at the same time.

In pattern 5268 you will find a transfer pattern of seven motifs (one for each day of the week) averaging about 5¾x8½ inches; illustrations of the stitches needed; color suggestions, and material requirements.

KROGER TO AWARD PRIZE TO CITY'S OLDEST CITIZEN

How long have you lived here?

If you've lived in this town longer than any one else you may win a valuable prize from Kroger's.

Announcement was made yesterday by officials of the Kroger Company that a prize would be awarded to the person who has lived longest in this town. The prize will be awarded on the basis of the number of years lived here, not on age of contestants.

It is expected that a great number of local residents who have been here for many years will compete for the honor of being known as the oldest resident. Officials of the Kroger Company stated that undoubtedly the contest would bring to light many interesting sidelights on the early years of this town. Every citizen will be keenly interested in learning who the town's oldest resident is.

Contestants are to register their names and the dates of the settlement in the town at the Kroger store. The Kroger manager will compile the list of old timers and the number of years of residence here and it is expected that more than 25 to 50 contestants will register. A photo of the prize winner will be published in these columns following the contest.

The Old Timer's Contest is being sponsored by the Kroger Company as part of their local celebration. Much interest has been aroused by the contest and everyone will watch for the outcome with a great deal of interest.

PATTERN 5268

Dutch girls somehow are the symbol of cleanliness. And since the modern kitchen is the last word in shining spotlessness, these Dutch figures belong right there. Can't you picture them in shades of blue? Or, if you prefer, do them in black with one or more other colors—that would make a striking decoration! You'll enjoy doing these Dutch girls in all their daily household activities for they're almost entirely in cross stitch. And they're 8 to the inch crosses too. If there's a hope chest you know of, let these be your donation—you'll know you've contributed something that is practical and lovely at the same time.

In pattern 5268 you will find a transfer pattern of seven motifs (one for each day of the week) averaging about 5¾x8½ inches; illustrations of the stitches needed; color suggestions, and material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Herald Household Arts Dept., 124 W. Main-st, Circleville, O.

CIRCUIT CLOUT WINS PURCELL EDGE, 5 TO 2

Denney Connects With Slow Ball to Defeat Callahan In Well-played Game.

One of the best-played games of the current recreation ball season went on the record book Monday evening when the Eshelman Feeds defeated the highly-touted Pickaway Dairy team, 5 to 2.

Carl Purcell and Eddie Callahan mixed in a real duel with each giving six hits. Purcell refused to allow more than one in any inning while Callahan weakened in the third to allow a single, a walk and a home run to permit enough runs to cross the plate to give the Feeds a victory.

Only in one inning was Purcell really in trouble. That was the seventh when after two were out Radcliffe was safe on an error, R. Faunaugh ingled, but he put on the brakes and got Byron Eby on a fly ball.

Eight Whiff Breeze

Callahan fanned eight men, getting the entire side in the first inning and retiring the last batter in the sixth, seventh and eighth frames on strikeouts. Purcell had only two strikeouts.

The undefeated Cities Service team and Jones Specials meet tonight.

Here's how the scoring was done Monday:

Eshelman third inning: P. Valentine walked after one was out and Tomlinson forced him. Tomlinson went to second on a passed ball and scored when Dunkle singled to left. The count was three balls and no strikes on Denney when Callahan tossed in a slow ball. Denney lined it to the automobiles in left field for a home run.

Pickaway Dairy fourth inning: Eby walked and reached second on a passed ball. Jenkins flied out and so did Dumm but Strawser singled to left scoring Eby.

Dairy sixth inning: Eby singled and scored on an infield error on Strawser's grounder.

Eshelman eighth: Tomlinson was safe on an error, Dunkle singled and Denney was safe on an error, Tomlinson scoring. Purcell, Denney and Canter were easy the latter fanning with two men on base.

Eshelman ninth: Leasure led off with a triple and scored as J. Valentine grounded out.

May Seek Governor

It is hoped by this column that Governor Lehman of New York grants Alabama Pitts, ex-convict from Sing Sing, a full pardon thus making him eligible to participate in organized baseball. The committee of the minor leagues in charge of such thing ruled Pitts out on Monday. Now Johnny Evers, general manager of the Albany club, is carrying the appeal to Commissioner Landis; if Kenesaw Mountain is adamant, Lehman will be the next person sought—Pitts deserves a break * * *

* * *

Will Not Starve

Even if he doesn't get to play with Albany he won't starve, although it will be a blow—He has a fine offer from the touring House of David team and can get plenty of athletic jobs—This fall and winter professional football, now on a high scale, will employ him—We hope that someday Pitts will be in position to thumb his nose at the Honorable Judge Braham and the committee that ruled him out * * *

LAWES TO PLEAD WITH MR. LANDIS

OSSINING, N. Y., June 11— Warden Lewis E. Lawes, of Sing Sing prison, will appeal personally to Judge K. M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball, on behalf of Alabama Pitts, he said here today.

Pitts, who was turned own on his appeal to the executive committee of the National Association of Professional Baseball leagues for a reversal of President Bramham's decision barring him from accepting a post with the Albany Senators, will also appeal to Commissioner Landis.

Lawes, referring to the committee's statement that "the interests of Pitts will best be served by offering that opportunity in some field where his activities will not be subjected to constant public scrutiny," said:

"We desire public scrutiny. No former inmate up to any chicanery is going to welcome public scrutiny. The only thing that Pitts could steal in baseball is a base. Why not allow him to play if it is the best thing he can do?"

INDIANS TO GET ROLLIE HEMSLEY

CLEVELAND, June 11— Rollie Hemsley, ace catcher on the St. Louis Brown aggregation, probably will don a Cleveland Indian uniform tomorrow to take the place of Glenn Myatt, veteran backstop unconditionally released by Manager Walter Johnson.

Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Browns, has agreed to the Indians' terms, approximately $20,000 in cash and Pitcher Thornton Lee and Catcher Bill Brenzel. Today he was to try to get the consent of the owners of the St. Louis team.

The Indians were to meet the Philadelphia Athletics in a doubleheader at League park here this afternoon.

GOLF FACTS

Number 637

ALEX MORRISON says:

Recently I broadcast the play of the Metropolitan Open on the Lakeville course at Great Neck, Long Island. This job afforded me a fine chance to compare the swings of Runyan, Macfarlane, Ghezzi, Hines, Kinder, Picard and other players in the National Open.

Young Picard shines as the best swinger since Bobby Jones' retirement. His tall, slender build, with exceptionally long arms and good-sized hands, makes it rather easy for him to whip the club around with terrific speed. He doesn't appear to be hitting the ball very hard, but the speed of the clubhead just about equals that of Jones.

This means that he doesn't have to pound the ball the way most of the younger pros do. If he happens to be playing in your neighborhood, watch him. You'll profit by it.

PRIEST'S SUICIDE

TURNU-SEVERIN—The Rev. Victor Ulneau terrified his congregation by throwing himself from the belfry-window as his parishioners were leaving the church after an unusually impressive Sunday morning sermon. Dressed in the gorgeous, gilded robe of a Greek-Orthodox padre, he jumped down and smashed his head, dying instantly. Many women fainted. No explanation was given for the act.

CIRCUIT CLOUT WINS PURCELL EDGE, 5 TO 2

Denney Connects With Slow Ball to Defeat Callahan In Well-played Game.

One of the best-played games of the current recreation ball season went on the record book Monday evening when the Eshelman Feeds defeated the highly-touted Pickaway Dairy team, 5 to 2.

Carl Purcell and Eddie Callahan mixed in a real duel with each giving six hits. Purcell refused to allow more than one in any inning while Callahan weakened in the third to allow a single, a walk and a home run to permit enough runs to cross the plate to give the Feeds a victory.

Only in one inning was Purcell really in trouble. That was the seventh when after two were out Radcliffe was safe on an error, R. Faunaugh ingled, but he put on the brakes and got Byron Eby on a fly ball.

Eight Whif Breeze

Callahan fanned eight men, getting the entire side in the first inning and retiring the last batter in the sixth, seventh and eighth frames on strikeouts. Purcell had only two strikeouts.

The undefeated Cities Service team and Jones Specials meet tonight.

Here's how the scoring was done Monday:

Eshelman third inning: P. Valentine walked after one was out and Tomlinson forced him. Tomlinson went to second on a passed ball and scored when Dunkle singled to left. The count was three balls and no strikes on Denney when Callahan tossed in a slow ball. Denney lined it to the automobiles in left field for a home run.

Pickaway Dairy fourth inning: Eby walked and reached second on a passed ball. Jenkins flied out and so did Dumm but Strawser singled to left scoring Eby.

Dairy sixth inning: Eby singled and scored on an infield error on Strawser's grounder.

Eshelman eighth: Tomlinson was safe on an error, Dunkle singled and Denney was safe on an error, Tomlinson scoring. Purcell, Denney and Canter were easy the latter fanning with two men on base.

Eshelman ninth: Leasure led off with a triple and scored as J. Valentine grounded out.

May Seek Governor

It is hoped by this column that Governor Lehman of New York grants Alabama Pitts, ex-convict from Sing Sing, a full pardon thus making him eligible to participate in organized baseball—The committee of the minor leagues in charge of such thing ruled Pitts out on Monday—Now Johnny Evers, general manager of the Albany club, is carrying the appeal to Commissioner Landis; if Kenesaw Mountain is adamant, Lehman will be the next person sought—Pitts deserves a break * *

Will Not Starve

Even if he doesn't get to play with Albany he won't starve, although it will be a blow—He has a fine offer from the touring House of David team and can get plenty of athletic jobs—This fall and winter professional football now on a high scale, will employ him—We hope that someday Pitts will be in position to thumb his nose at the Honorable Judge Braham and the committee that ruled him out * * *

PARKS, THOMSON MAY BEGIN TOUR

PITTSBURGH, June 11— Sam Parks Jr., recently crowned National open golf champion, today was making plans for his participation in the Ridgewood, N. J., open next September as a member of the 1935 Ryder cup team.

While stating his plans were as yet indefinite, Parks intimated he would like to be teamed with Jimmy Thomson, Long Beach, Cal., on an exhibition tour. Thomson was runner-up in the national open.

INDIANS TO GET ROLLIE HEMSLEY

CLEVELAND, June 11— Rollie Hemsley, ace catcher on the St. Louis Brown aggregation, probably will don a Cleveland Indian uniform tomorrow to take the place of Glenn Myatt, veteran backstop unconditionally released by Manager Walter Johnson.

Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Browns, has agreed to the Indians' terms — approximately $30,000 in cash and Pitcher Thornton Lee and Catcher Bill Brenzel. Today he was to try to get the consent of the owners of the St. Louis team.

The Indians were to meet the Philadelphia Athletics in a doubleheader at League park here this afternoon.

LAWES TO PLEAD WITH MR. LANDIS

OSSINING, N. Y., June 11— Warden Lewis E. Lawes, of Sing Sing prison, will appeal personally to Judge K. M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball, on behalf of Alabama Pitts, he said here today.

Pitts, who was turned own on his appeal to the executive committee of the National Association of Professional Baseball leagues for a reversal of President Bramham's decision barring him from accepting a post with the Albany Senators, will also appeal to Commissioner Landis.

Lawes referring to the committee's statement that "the interests of Pitts will best be served by offering that opportunity in some field where his activities will not be subjected to constant public scrutiny," said:

"We desire public scrutiny. No former inmate up to any chicanery is going to welcome public scrutiny. The only thing that Pitts could steal in baseball is a base. Why not allow him to play if it is the best thing he can do?"

GOLF FACTS

Number 637

ALEX MORRISON says:

Recently I broadcast the play of the Metropolitan Open on the Lakeville course at Great Neck, Long Island. This job afforded me a fine chance to compare the swings of Runyan, Macfarlane, Ghezzi, Hines, Kinder, Picard and other players in the National Open.

Young Picard shines as the best swinger since Bobby Jones' retirement. His tall, slender build, with exceptionally long arms and good-sized hands, makes it rather easy for him to whip the club around with terrific speed. He doesn't appear to be hitting the ball very hard, but the speed of the clubhead just about equals that of Jones.

This means that he doesn't have to pound the ball the way most of the younger pros do. If he happens to be playing in your neighborhood, watch him. You'll profit by it.

PRIEST'S SUICIDE

TURNU-SEVERIN—The Rev. Victor Ulneau terrified his congregation by throwing himself from the belfry-window as his parishioners were leaving the church after an unusually impressive Sunday morning sermon. Dressed in the gorgeous, gilded robe of a Greek-Orthodox padre, he jumped down and smashed his head, dying instantly. Many women fainted. No explanation was given for the act.

PATTERN 9340

Very flattering, very simple and very much in vogue are dressy ruffles topping the "special date" dress! There are so many summer occasions when a pert frock can give your spirits a real lift and here's one whose perky freshness won't wilt! Not if you make it of one of those charming sheer cottons that tub so well—the organdies, the dimities, the voiles. You might have the ruffles picoted in a color to match the print and choose matching buttons. You'll like the speed with which you accomplish the charming result too! The graceful front skirt panel treats the waistline softly and obligingly becomes a flattering sash in back. Complete, Diagrammed Sew Chart Included.

ENTER POLITICS, IS DAVEY'S PLEA

COLUMBUS, June 11—A class of 1,346 Ohio State university graduates, advised to "enter politics" by Gov. Martin L. Davey, took up the quest for opportunity today following a "new style" commencement in the university stadium last evening.

The customary commencement addresses were dispensed with as Ohio State's large class received diplomas before a crowd of several thousand friends. Dr. George W. Rightmire, president of the university, spoke briefly, expressing appreciation of the school's staff for "contributing to our understanding of youth."

Governor Davey, in another brief talk, appealed for more youth in politics.

"We need youth's idealism," said Davey. "We need it in public affairs. I hope you graduates will not leave politics to the worn out type of thought."

Dr. Rightmire's message was brief.

"You have contributed betterment to our procedure in dealing with students and their manifold interests," he stated.

law," which sets the penalty at death for kidnaping where the victim is taken across a state line.

"It appears," said Hoover, "that there was no violation of the Lindbergh law because the boy evidently was not taken across a state line.

"The kidnapers probably will be prosecuted by the state of Washington, where the maximum penalty for kidnaping is death."

With this practical certainty that the prosecution for the actual kidnaping will be by the state authorities, Attorney General Cummings and Hoover both emphatically declared the federal authorities would render every possible cooperation to the state of Washington in this prosecution.

The possibility that the federal authorities may choose to indict the Waleys. Mahan and any other accomplices for writing extortion letters remains strong, it was indicated.

Hoover said that the Waleys shortly will be transported to Tacoma where a special grand jury will be convened to indict them and Mahan.

The extreme penalty—death—will be the lot of Harmon Waley and Mahan if the authorities are successful in their prosecution, justice department officials pointed out.

It was not believed, however, that the electric chair would be asked for the pretty 19-year-old Margaret, wife of Waley. Hoover implied that federal authorities were of the belief that she was an unimportant, even unwilling accomplice in the kidnaping and imprisonment of the 9-year-old victim.

STUDEBAKER still stock car champion OF INDIANAPOLIS SPEEDWAY!

THIS year, the specially built racing cars swept the boards in the Memorial Day race at the Indianapolis Speedway. Not a car produced by a stock manufacturer was able to last the 500 miles.

The great performance at Indianapolis is still Studebaker's. In 1932 and 1933, the last time Studebaker contested, cars entered by the Studebaker factory finished brilliantly. In 1933, seven of the first twelve winners were Studebaker powered. In 1932, the leading Studebaker broke all previous time records for the race.

Get that speedway stamina in your 1935 car. Get a Studebaker—a Champion. You can do so now for just a few dollars more than you have to pay for one of the very lowest priced cars.

LILY 8 FEET HIGH

AMSTERDAM—A giant Arum lily, 8 feet high and 3½ feet across, is attracting crowds to the hothouse of the Agricultural High School of Wageningen. The lily, which is from the tropics, seldom blossoms. The flower lasts only two days. It blossomed the first time in July 1932, and is the only specimen in Europe.

ENTER POLITICS, IS DAVEY'S PLEA

COLUMBUS, June 11—A class of 1,346 Ohio State university graduates, advised to "enter politics" by Gov. Martin L. Davey, took up the quest for opportunity today following a "new style" commencement in the university stadium last evening.

The customary commencement addresses were dispensed with as Ohio State's large class received diplomas before a crowd of several thousand friends. Dr. George W. Rightmire, president of the university, spoke briefly, expressing appreciation of the school's staff for "contributing to our understanding of youth."

Governor Davey, in another brief talk, appealed for more youth in politics.

"We need youth's idealism," said Davey. "We need it in public affairs. I hope you graduates will not leave politics to the worn out type of thought."

Dr. Rightmire's message was brief.

"You have contributed betterment to our procedure in dealing with students and their manifold interests," he stated.

law," which sets the penalty at death for kidnaping where the victim is taken across a state line.

"It appears," said Hoover, "that there was no violation of the Lindbergh law because the boy evidently was not taken across a state line.

"The kidnapers probably will be prosecuted by the state of Washington, where the maximum penalty for kidnaping is death."

With this practical certainty that the prosecution for the actual kidnaping will be by the state authorities, Attorney General Cummings and Hoover both emphatically declared the federal authorities would render every possible cooperation to the state of Washington in this prosecution.

The possibility that the federal authorities may choose to indict the Waleys Mahan and any other accomplices for writing extortion letters remains strong, it was indicated.

Hoover said that the Waleys shortly will be transported to Tacoma where a special grand jury will be convened to indict them and Mahan.

The extreme penalty—death—will be the lot of Harmon Waley and Mahan if the authorities are successful in their prosecution, justice department officials pointed out.

It was not believed, however, that the electric chair would be asked for the pretty 19-year-old Margaret, wife of Waley. Hoover implied that federal authorities were of the belief that she was an unimportant, even unwilling accomplice in the kidnaping and imprisonment of the 9-year-old victim.

STUDEBAKER still stock car champion OF INDIANAPOLIS SPEEDWAY!

THIS year, the specially built racing cars swept the boards in the Memorial Day race at the Indianapolis Speedway. Not a car produced by a stock manufacturer was able to last the 500 miles.

The great performance at Indianapolis is still Studebaker's. In 1932 and 1933, the last time Studebaker contested, cars entered by the Studebaker factory finished brilliantly. In 1933, seven of the first twelve winners were Studebaker powered. In 1932, the leading Studebaker broke all previous time records for the race.

Get that speedway stamina in your 1935 car. Get a Studebaker—a Champion. You can do so now for just a few dollars more than you have to pay for one of the very lowest priced cars.
